

Speakes urges grads to conquer handicap of youth

As Gallaudet's graduates face the uncertainties of the future one thing is certain: they are limited only by their self-confidence and creativity. So said Larry Speakes, former chief spokesman for the President of the United States and currently senior vice president of Communications for Merrill Lynch and Company, Inc., in his commencement address to Gallaudet's Class of 1987.

"For you, the future is now," he told the graduates, adding that while challenges await them they should draw strength from the knowledge that others, too, have faced and overcome obstacles.

"The challenges that await you are many," Speakes said. "Generations before you have fought to overcome barriers to success. And you, too, may find that the way is not easy. Not because you now leave family and friends who understand life in a world of silence to join those who may not know what it is to be deaf.

"No. That challenge is a challenge already conquered—a barrier overcome. As new graduates, you have climbed that mountain. You are now poised to see the other side, to look out on a future as bright as you want it to be."

The challenge to recent graduates, Speakes stated, is the challenge brought about by their youth—"the handicap of being young."

"Your elders will tell you to wait, hold back, speak when you are spoken to. You may find yourself crying in vain, 'I have a better idea.' Your energy and creativity may fall on minds dulled by a generation gap. Your industriousness may go unappreciated by tired and weary elders. You certainly will hear again and again that sad refrain, 'We've never done it that way,' Speakes said.

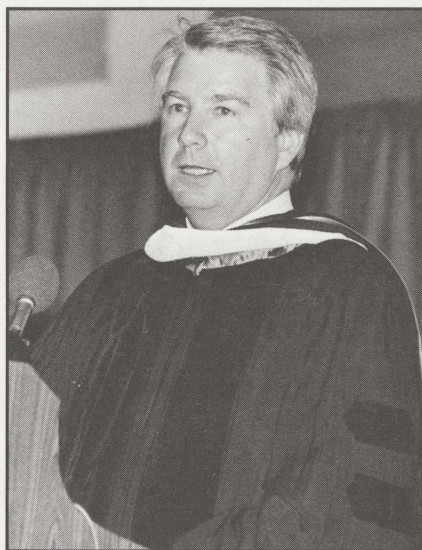

This is where the challenge lies, he maintained. "You must not only tell the world there is a better way, you must organize the parade, then lead it. Never forget: young ideas are good ideas."

Speakes cited a Washington Post survey of today's young people, showing them to be optimistic, self-reliant and achievement-oriented. "In short, your generation brims with confidence about the future," he said.

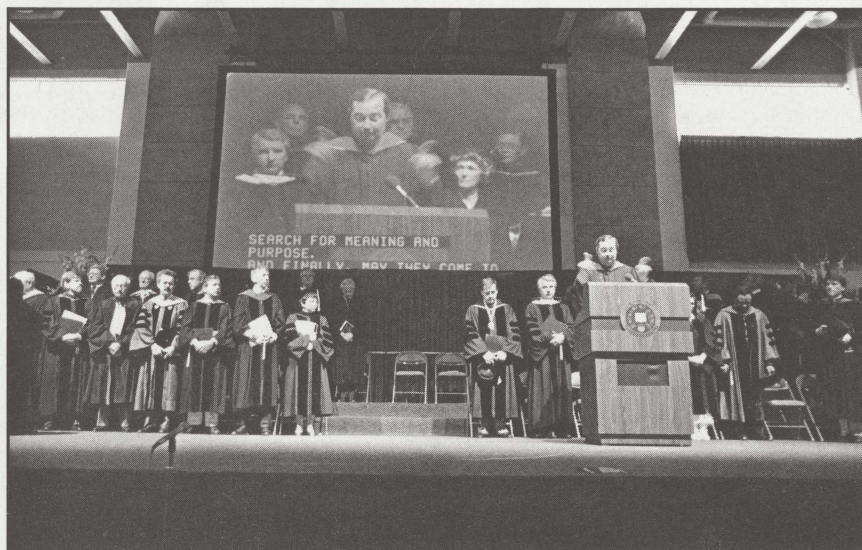

He then gave examples of young people's contributions in the areas of government, science, medicine and the arts. Noting that young people now more than ever are eyeing business careers, Speakes also gave examples of young people who have succeeded in the business world.

"These are your contemporaries," he told the graduates. "They have opened

Class of '87 first to receive University diplomas

Members of the Class of 1987, the first graduating class to receive diplomas bearing the name Gallaudet University, were awarded their degrees during Gallaudet's 123rd commencement Monday, May 18 at the Field House.

Gallaudet President Jerry C. Lee remarked that the commencement marked the beginning of a new era at Gallaudet, one expected to be "as distinguished as our collegiate heritage of the past.

"Celebrating events can be a joyous time but it is even better when we celebrate the people responsible for the events," he said. "I find this occasion doubly gratifying because as we recognize the success of the Class of 1987, we are also recognizing Gallaudet University."

announced to the world that the graduates are ready to begin the next phase in their lives, Dr. Lee stated. "You have just completed an important part of the learning process," he said. "If Gallaudet has succeeded, we have taught you how much more there is to learn."

After Dr. Lee's remarks, the University recognized its three retiring faculty members: James Pickett, Donald Padden and Eugene McVicker. Dr. Pickett of Sensory Communication Research has been a faculty member for 23 years; Dr. McVicker, a professor of religion, has been on Gallaudet's faculty for 28 years; and Padden, an associate professor of physical education, has been a faculty member for 42 years.

Two honorary degrees were awarded. Congressman Silvio Conte (R-Mass.) received a Doctor of Laws degree and actress Marlee Matlin was awarded a Doctor of Humane Letters degree.

Described as a "consummate legislator who listens not only with his remarkable mind but with his enormous heart," Rep. Conte was recognized for a lifetime of public service in which he has been "an indefatigable supporter of programs that enhance the individual decency and human fulfillment of all citizens.

"Believing in a just, compassionate role of government, he has witnessed extraordinary accomplishments of individuals born with handicaps who are now productive members in society. Because he believes that every individual may attain greatness through dedication and sacrifice, he has served his nation in ways that extend the human potential," his citation reads in part.

Board of Trustees meets May 15-18

The Gallaudet University Board of Trustees approved at its May meeting the proposed faculty compensation system submitted by the administration, the creation of a therapeutic recreation major as well as tenure and promotions for faculty members.

In addition, the board accepted the resignation of Oliver T. Carr as a trustee. A resolution will be developed and sent to Carr expressing the board's appreciation for his service.

While the board, meeting May 15-18, adopted the administration's proposed faculty compensation system, its adoption does not guarantee implementation. Implementation of salary increases is contingent upon federal funding.

The board also approved a new therapeutic recreation program at the undergraduate level. Students in the program, which is expected to begin in the fall, will earn a bachelor of science degree in recreation and leisure studies within the Department of Physical Education and Recreation.

Students in the program will be prepared to serve hearing impaired special populations such as the physically, emotionally and mentally disabled, the socially deviant, substance abusers and the infirm elderly.

During the board meeting, tenure was awarded to the following University faculty members: Lynne Blennerhassett, psychology; Anne Butler, history; Jane Dillehay, biology; George Ivey, mathematics and computer science; Vicki Kemp, mathematics and computer science; Jane Hurst, philosophy/religion; David Pancost, English; Paul Setzer, art; Sam Trychin, psychology; Marin Allen, television, film a Lesser God," and her citation states that the production—as both a play and film—"has caught the conscience of the hearing audiences who have seen it, opening their eyes and their minds to the world of deaf people, the beauty of sign language and the issues the drama presents."

Moreover, Matlin's role as Sarah Norman "has advanced the cause of deaf people in a major way—bringing to the attention of the nation and now the world the abilities of deaf persons and the problems of being deaf in a hearing world." Matlin's success, the citation continues, is "a culmination of the work of the many deaf actors and actresses who have gone before ...; it is also a foundation on which other deaf persons, in the field of entertainment and in other professions, can build."

During the ceremony, the national anthem was sung by James Achtzehn, a faculty member in Gallaudet's Department of Education. Marta Belsky and Michelle Smith signed the national anthem. Congressman Walter Fauntroy (D-Washington, D.C.) sang "If You Believe," performing with members of the Gallaudet Dance Company. James Morgan sang "Up Where We Belong." Earnest Hargrove was the piano accompanist. The invocation was given by the Rev. Brien McCarthy and the benediction was given by the Rev. LeRoy Schauer.

Ceremonies honor outstanding grads

Twenty-nine graduate and undergraduate students were recognized during graduation ceremonies for their achievements at Gallaudet. Fifteen graduate students received awards during the Graduate Awards and Hooding Ceremony May 17 at Elstad Auditorium while 14 undergraduate students graduated with honors during commencement exercises May 18.

Cynthia Cunningham and Alyson Beecher received the Daniel Cloud Award, given to outstanding students in memory of the noted educator of deaf students.

Michele Dunne received the Helen Fay Award for the student considered most likely to make significant contributions in the field of teaching hearing-impaired children; Jean Piquette received the Marjorie Stull Memorial Scholarship Award for ability and aptitude in teaching deaf students on the basis of first-year graduate school performance; and Ruth Schilling received the Mima Bravo Award, which is given to a second-year student who demonstrates aptitude for and commitment to counseling deaf people.

Karen Kirkey received the Outstanding Student Achievement Award while Julie Ward and Robin Craig received the School of Communication Award for students most likely to create change or have an impact on their fields.

Debra Anzelone received the Seltzer League Award, which is given to a graduating audiology major who has demonstrated excellence in the program's academic and clinical areas and is expected to broaden the understanding of hearing and hearing loss.

Mary King, Cheryl Wu and Melanie Thornton received the Walter G. Ross Award for their active involvement in campus activities, committees and organizations.

Lorac Hintz received the William J. Zappetini Scholarship Award, given to a second-year student with a record of academic excellence who actively participates in student organizations.

Cynthia Patchke received the Graduate Student Research/Writing Award, which is given to a student who has written a paper judged to be an outstanding scientific or professional contribution to the field of deafness.

A Special Recognition Award for the Founding President of the Graduate Student Association was presented to Kenneth Breslow and a Special Recognition Award for the Founding Dean of the School of Communication was given to David Tweedie.

Pat Cox, professor and chair of the Department of Audiology, was presented the Outstanding Graduate Faculty Award and Arthur Roehrig was presented the Richard M. Phillips Award, given to an alumnus who demonstrates excellence in providing counseling services for deaf people.

The Outstanding External Collaborator Award, presented to an individual or organization whose support of Gallaudet graduate programs over the years has been exemplary, was given to the Division of Special Education and Administration at the University of Arizona.

At the undergraduate level, the following students graduated with honors: Gina Donofrio, Elizabeth Gillespie and Jamie Lowy graduated summa cum laude, with Lowy also graduating with honors in English. Dawn Bradley, Denise Brown, Kevin McDonough, Julia Petersen, Felice Pyser and Lisa Weller graduated magna cum laude and Marla Berkowitz, Jeanine Faw, Pamela Linza, Susan Moyer and Jacqueline Padilla graduated cum laude.

Gallaudet confers cum laude degrees

There were no "with distinction" degrees awarded at this year's Commencement—not because the Class of 1987 lacked high achieving students but because this year, for the first time in its history, Gallaudet conferred degrees summa cum laude, magna cum laude and cum laude.

A new policy, approved last April by the Faculty Senate, states that students who graduate with a grade point average of 3.8 or above receive their degrees summa cum laude; 3.6 or above, magna cum laude; and 3.4 or above, cum laude.

"Conferring degrees cum laude appropriately acknowledges our high achieving students, and is more in line with Gallaudet's university status," said Debra Siel, academic counselor in the Honors and Academic Advising Office. "After investigating honors policies in the [Washington metropolitan] Consortium, I found that all of these universities confer degrees cum laude."

In addition, gold honor stoles and gold medallions were given with these degrees. The medallions were engraved with the Gallaudet seal and, on the reverse side, the student's name and grade point average.

and photography; Harriet Kaplan, audiology; James Mahshie, audiology; Diane Hottendorf, physical education and recreation; Thomas Jones, education; and Francine White, counseling.

The following Pre-College faculty members also were awarded tenure: Barbara Martin-Fields, MSSD mathematics; Margaret Reichard, MSSD home economics; Jane Walter Baldi, MSSD English; Janet Weinstock, MSSD English; Naomi Zowader, MSSD mathematics; Lynne Erting, KDES preschool; Shelby Kubis, KDES intermediate; and Bettie Waddy-Smith, KDES preschool.

A number of University faculty promotions also were approved by the board. The following faculty members were promoted to professors: Patricia Byrd, English; David Snyder, physics; Sam Trychin, psychology; Marita Danek, counseling; James Achtzehn, education; Martin Minter, physical education and recreation; James Fernandes, communication arts; and William Moses, theatre arts.

The following were promoted from assistant to associate professor: Virginia Covington, English; Astrid Goodstein, academic advising; Robert Zambrano, English; Rachel Hartig, foreign languages; Jane Hurst, philosophy/religion; Barbara Brauer, Center for Studies in Education and Human Development; Donna Mertens, educational foundations and research; Ceil Lucas, linguistics; W. Michael Kemp, sign communication; Jeffrey Grandel, theatre arts; and Catherine Andersen, preparatory studies.

Promotions from instructor to assistant professor were given to: Jeffrey Lewis, counseling; E. Lynn Jacobowitz, sign communication; Barbara Hardaway, preparatory studies; Cynthia Peters, preparatory studies; Sharon Davis, preparatory studies; and James Nickerson, preparatory studies.

The board also approved the status of professor emeritus for James Pickett, who retired this year after 23 years on Gallaudet's faculty.

In other action, the board approved as submitted the revised Kendall Demonstration Elementary School Policy Advisory Council Bylaws. The board also adopted a revised travel policy authorizing the use of an exclusive travel agent who is required to shop for the lowest fare and set up the negotiation of preferred rates with hotels and car rental agencies. The policy also mandates that specific guidelines for travel procedures be developed. The policy soon will be distributed to budget unit heads.

The board also approved as revised the jury witness leave policy. Changed because of the new tax law, the policy will be circulated to budget unit heads in the near future.

Graduate Fellowship Fund grants were approved during the board meeting. Grants will be awarded to the following: Stephen Charles Baldwin, $2,500; Donald Bangs, $4,000; Karen Christie, $2,500; Teresa Curtin, $4,000; Laurie Lee Johnson, $4,000; Mara Ann Pace, $4,000; Bonnie Ryan, $4,000; Kathleen Brenza Samuel, $4,000; Emmanuel Odigogo Ojile, $3,000; and Carolyn Stern, $2,600.

Conte, Matlin get honorary degrees

John Carlin, author, poet and artist, was the first to receive one. An 1825 graduate of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Deaf, he was among the first to encourage Edward Miner Gallaudet to establish a college for deaf students and in 1864 received the institution's first honorary degree—an honorary master of arts degree.

Since that time, the University has awarded more than 290 honorary degrees to those individuals who have made contributions to the field of deafness education and to deaf individuals who have excelled in their endeavors. Congressmen, federal employees, educators, businessmen, entertainers and persons from national and international organizations serving the deaf community have received honorary degrees from Gallaudet.

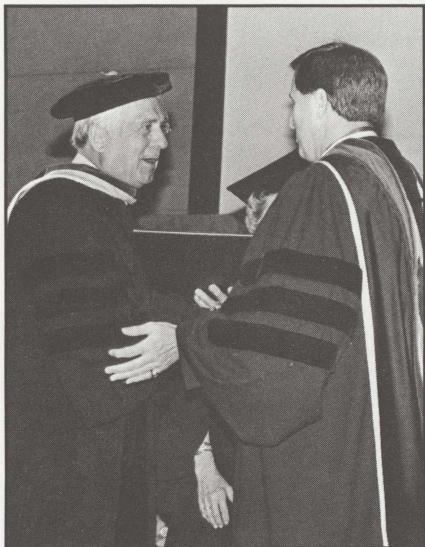

Congressman Silvio Conte (R-Mass) and actress Marlee Matlin were the most recent recipients of honorary degrees, having been awarded them during this year's commencement exercises. Conte was awarded a Doctor of Laws degree for his congressional leadership in the areas of health, education and research while Matlin was awarded a Doctor of Humane Letters degree in recognition of her achievements in the communication arts.

"Congressman Conte is a powerful advocate of programs for disabled people in the U.S. House of Representatives," stated Gallaudet President Jerry C. Lee. "His efforts in securing needed funding for programs serving disabled people have a significant effect on the quality of life of deaf Americans."

Matlin, who won an Oscar for her performance in the film "Children of a Lesser God," was awarded an honorary degree because "her performance increased the respect and understanding that millions of hearing people have for deaf people," Provost Catherine Ingold noted. Her award, Dr. Lee said, is "a statement by Gallaudet University that deaf people can and do achieve great things in the performing arts."

Dr. Lee added that the honorary degree affords the University the chance to call attention to an individual's achievements. "It is simply a formal way of expressing admiration or appreciation," he said. "It gives the University great pleasure to present honorary doctorates to deaf persons who have achieved special distinction in their fields and also to hearing persons who have been supportive of deaf people in various ways."

Gallaudet President Jerry C. Lee presents Congressman Silvio Conte (R-Mass) his honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Board members Harvey Corson and Laurel Glass stand with actress Marlee Matlin as she awaits her honorary degree.

Among Ourselves

Diane Hottendorf, director of the Gallaudet Dance Company; Sue Gill-Gould, assistant director of the dance troupe; Cindy Compton, an audiologist in the Audiology Department; and Tim McCarty, director of the MSSD Performing Arts Department, participated in "Better Hearing and Speech Month" kick-off events held at the Sheraton-Carlton Hotel in Washington, D.C.

Catherine Andersen, chair of the Communication and Developmental Studies Department at the School of Preparatory Studies (SPS), spoke to a group of 70 second graders at Cashell Elementary School in Rockville, Md. Andersen taught the students finger-spelling and talked about communication between deaf and hearing people. She also arranged for the students to join an SPS communication class as part of their study of communication issues. Other SPS faculty members involved were Nancy Lewis, Mike Wallace, Clayton Valli and Kay Zaccagnini.

doors for themselves and, in the process, opened them for you.

"But yours will be an even newer frontier, with new opportunities to use all the creativity, energy and know-how you possess," he said. "Only in this great nation can one rise from the depths of poverty to the heights of success. Conversely, only in America can one choose to leave the comforts of luxury to live one's life in poverty as a means of serving other people," he stated.

How they will live their lives is up to each graduate. As Speakes said, graduation is both an ending and a beginning. "You pause between the past and future, the old and new, the known and unknown—a time to reflect on what you have accomplished, and what your accomplishments will be."

Reception honors Gallaudet's 'friends'

Welcoming more than 160 guests to the "Special Friends of Gallaudet University" reception and dinner held May 17 on Olmsted Green, President Jerry C. Lee said, "We are extremely pleased that so many of Gallaudet's supporters and friends could share this evening with us. Our University's success has occurred through the collective efforts of many individuals—and this 'friends' dinner is symbolic of our profound gratitude."

Dr. and Mrs. Lee were joined by members of the Board of Trustees in honoring major contributors to Gallaudet.

Before the dinner, Board of Trustees Chair Jane Bassett Spilman introduced William Varrieur and Terrence J. O'Rourke, who have made donations to University programs through the Tania Varrieur Reese Fund and the Frederick C. Schreiber Institute.

The Tania Varrieur Reese Fund was established in April as a memorial to Reese by her parents, William and Gloria Varrieur. The purpose of this fund, now totaling more than $4,000, is to provide funds for qualifying students who have no other financial resources for activities such as internships, creative academic programs or field trips. Dr. Varrieur is the director of Gallaudet's School of Management Project.

The Frederick C. Schreiber Institute was established in honor of the late deaf community leader who dedicated himself to advocacy through the National Association of the Deaf (NAD) and Gallaudet, his alma mater.

The committee for developing the institute is chaired by O'Rourke, owner of T.J. Publishers, Inc. O'Rourke will continue the institute's fund-raising campaign. Kathleen Schreiber, Dr. Schreiber's widow and a Gallaudet staff member, is the institute's honorary chair.

The purposes of the Frederick C. Schreiber Institute include endowing a chair for "endeavors compatible with the aims of the University" and sponsoring short-term activities such as lectures, workshops, forums, performances and conferences. In addition, the library materials contained in the circulating deafness collection and the rare books collection will be named the Frederick C. Schreiber Deafness Collection. Prior to the reception/dinner, the Surdna Foundation contributed $100,000 to the collection.

According to Lou Markwith, vice president for University Relations, the Frederick C. Schreiber Institute represents Gallaudet's first campaign to establish a permanent endowment for a major program. The endowment goal is $1 million, of which $400,000 already has been contributed.

The focus of this endowment is the deaf community, its culture, language and history, Markwith said. "The funds will enable Gallaudet to invite deaf scholars and professionals to participate in campus activities. Dr. Schreiber exemplified the kind of role model that Gallaudet aims to provide for its students."

Agreement will save University money on PCs

Computer Services (CS) supports the IBM architecture in personal computers (PCs). At the same time, the University has negotiated a discount agreement with NEC Information Systems, a company that manufactures an IBM-compatible PC.

With the discount, an IBM-compatible AT-class PC—the APC IV Powermate 2—can be purchased at a $1,000 savings.

CS has tested the APC IV Powermate 2 PC. It has PC-bus compatibility and increased speed when compared with the AT from IBM.

CS will use this Powermate 2 as the AT-class machine for those areas needing PC-bus compatibility until vendors have interface cards compatible with the new IBM micro-channel.

Included with the Powermate 2 are: 80286 CPU (8/10 MHz selectable), 640 KB memory, 1 serial and 2 parallel ports, 40 MB hard disk, multisync color monitor, advanced graphics, math co-processor, 1.2 MB diskette drive, MS DOS 3.2 and GW BASIC. A 5.25-inch 360 KB diskette drive and/or a 3.5-inch 720 KB diskette drive are options. To request a copy of the specifications, call x5273.
